Our Journey in Faith

Consumed as we are of ISIS, let us not forget the terrible tragedy of September 11, 2001. When I was a child in school I recall the air raid drills that we participated in, yet there was an underlying impression that an attack would never occur. After all we were the United States, the strongest military power of the world. What a shock it was when we were attacked on September 11, 2001 - not by another nation, but by a band of terrorists known as Al Qaeda. This was done in the name of Allah as part of a holy war (jihad) against infidels. The loss of life (over 3,000) seemed not to matter, but was considered as retribution for whatever so-called ungodly lives we lived in the West. This attack was directed against a seat of business, the World Trade Center, and against our government, the Pentagon: another proposed attack on either the White House or Congressional building was thwarted by the passengers and crew as their hijacked plane flew over Pennsylvania.

Their barbarous acts engulfed our nation in grief and have left us all shaken with uncertainty. How vulnerable we have become and how little we understand those who are inimical to us. Does jealousy and hatred generate such a response? Could a world religion, Islam, cultivate such sentiments? We have been assured that the Islamic world regrets such actions, that the work of Al Qaeda is that of fanatics and if Iraq and Afghanistan are any indication, indiscriminate murder of other Islamists seems to be part and parcel of Al Qaeda's modus operandi. No one is really safe from this hoard of murderers.

In the face of those tragedies, frightened and confused that America was, bravery and compassion shined forth. New Yorkers, especially the police and firemen and plain ordinary citizens rushed to help the injured and dying people of the World Trade Center. Fr. Michael Judge, a fire chaplain was among the heroes. Countless funerals were held and the families of the deceased still mourn their great loss. This great sacrifice of innocent, hard working people will always be remembered. Eternal rest be granted unto them, o Lord, and let perpetual life shine upon them. May they rest in peace.

Father James F. Healy
