Our Prayer for Vocations to Religious Life as Sisters, Brothers, and Deacons:

Loving and Generous God, it is You who calls us by name and asks us to follow You. Help us to grow in the love and service of our Church as we experience it today.

Grant us faith-filled leaders who will embrace Christ's Mission of love and justice. Bless the Church by raising up dedicated and generous leaders from our families and friends who will serve your people as Sisters, Brothers, and Deacons.

Inspire us to know You better and open our hearts to hear Your call.

We ask this through the intercession of Mary the Mother of the Church and through the saving grace of our Lord, Jesus Christ. Amen.

Traditional Latin Mass

As you know according to the motu proprio of Benedict XVI, the Roman rite of the Catholic Church consists in two forms: the Ordinary Form of the Mass, which is the Mass after the reforms of Vatican II and the Extraordinary Form of the Mass which is the form of the Mass which goes back over 1000 years. It is also called the Traditional Latin Mass. I will make that available for those who wish to participate in this form of the Mass on Sundays at 1:30PM except on the fourth Sunday of the month where the time will be 2:30PM. It will be in the dialogue Mass where the congregation would make all the responses with the server/s

"The Mass, Prayer, the Rosary — nothing else can avail"

Both Pope Benedict and Pope Francis have recommended the novel The Lord of this World by Hugh Benson written in the early 20th century. The "Lord of the World" is also translated in Scripture as "The Prince of this World", a title that Jesus gave to Satan. It is predicted in many ways the times we are in. The advice Fr. Percy Franklin gives in the novel is very appropriate for our times. Here is an excerpt:

Persecution, he (the reigning Pope) said, was coming. There had been a riot or two already. But persecution was not to be feared. It would no doubt cause apostasies, as it had always done, but these were deplorable only on account of the individual apostates. On the other hand, it would reassure the faithful; and purge out the half-hearted.

Once, in the early ages, Satan's attack had been made on the bodily side, with whips and fire and beasts; in the sixteenth century it had been on the intellectual side; in the twentieth century on the springs of moral and spiritual life. Now it seemed as if the assault was on all three planes at once.

But what was chiefly to be feared was the positive influence of Humanitarianism(Note: This was defined as the notion that you no longer need God, that humanity can be saved on its own, and brotherhood/sisterhood achieved by humanity alone. This essentially is the message of Freemasonry. Or put another way in the novel it was the false view that there was no God, no priest but the politician, and no prophet but education): it was coming, like the kingdom of God, with power; it was crushing the imaginative and the romantic, it was assuming rather than asserting its own truth; it was smothering with bolsters instead of wounding and stimulating with steel or controversy.

It seemed to be forcing its way, almost objectively, into the inner world. Persons who had scarcely heard its name were professing its tenets; priests absorbed it, as they absorbed God in Communion—he mentioned the names of the recent apostates—children drank it in like Christianity itself. The soul "naturally Christian" seemed to be becoming "the soul naturally infidel."

Persecution, cried the priest, was to be welcomed like salvation, prayed for, and grasped; but he feared that the authorities were too shrewd, and knew the antidote and the poison apart. There might be individual martyrdoms—in fact there would be, and very many—but they would be in spite of secular government, not because of it. Finally, he expected, Humanitarianism would presently put on the dress of liturgy and sacrifice, and when that was done, the Church's cause, unless God intervened, would be over.

Fr. Percy Franklin sat back, trembling. "Yes, my son. And what do you think should be done?" Percy flung out his hands.

"Holy Father—the mass, prayer, the rosary. These first and last. The world denies their power: it is on their power that Christians must throw all their weight. All things in Jesus Christ—in Jesus Christ, first and last. Nothing else can avail. He must do all, for we can do nothing."

Lord of the World

St. Peter Canisius S.J.: "Better that only a few Catholics should be left, staunch and sincere in their religion, than that they should, remaining many, desire as it were, to be in collusion with the Church's enemies and in conformity with the open foes of our faith."
