7 Deadly Sins and their Children

The Seven Deadly Sins (Pride, Greed, Lust, Envy, Gluttony, Wrath, Sloth) are seen as "heads" or sources of other sins, but they also have "children" or specific actions/vices stemming from them, Here's a breakdown of the Capital Sins and common associated "children" or manifestations:

- Pride (Superbia): Arrogance, vanity, self-importance, leading to blasphemy, disobedience, and stubbornness.
- Greed (Avaritia): Excessive desire for wealth/possessions, leading to theft, hoarding, and treachery.
- Lust (Luxuria): Disordered desire for sexual pleasure, leading to impurity, fornication, and adultery.
- Envy (Invidia): Sadness at another's good fortune, leading to spite, slander, and hatred.
- Gluttony (Gula): Excessive consumption (food/drink), leading to drunkenness, wastefulness, and overindulgence.
- Wrath (Ira): Uncontrolled anger, leading to rage, violence, vengeance, and cruelty.
- Sloth (Acedia): Spiritual laziness or apathy, leading to despair, idleness, and neglect of duty.

Key Takeaway: The concept of "children" (or "daughters") helps illustrate how deep-seated tendencies (the Capital Sins) manifest as specific harmful actions (the "children"), which can then be countered with corresponding virtues (the "remedies").

In traditional Christian theology, the antidotes to the seven deadly sins are known as the Seven Capital Virtues (or "Remedial Virtues"). These virtues serve as direct moral opposites to neutralize the spiritual damage of each vice.

Antidotes to the Seven Deadly Sins

- Pride (Exaltation of self): The antidote is Humility. It involves recognizing one's value as a gift from God while viewing others as equally valuable, countering the need to make others feel smaller to feel superior.
- Envy (Sorrow at another's good): The antidote is Kindness (or Gratitude). This is practiced through "sympathetic joy"—actively rejoicing in the successes and blessings of others rather than resenting them.
- Wrath (Uncontrolled anger/revenge): The antidote is Patience (or Meekness). It requires enduring pain or provocation without lashing out, allowing time to heal rifts and seek reconciliation rather than vengeance.
- Sloth (Spiritual or physical laziness): The antidote is Diligence (or Zeal). This virtue focuses on fulfilling one's duties with care and persistence, overcoming the apathy or indifference that leads to withdrawal from work and service.
- Greed (Inordinate desire for wealth): The antidote is Charity (or Generosity). It involves opening the heart to the needs of others and giving freely of one's time, money, and talents.
- Gluttony (Overindulgence in consumption): The antidote is Temperance (or Asceticism). This is the practice of moderation and self-control, finding a balance between excess and self-denial in food, drink, and material pleasure.
- Lust (Inordinate craving for sexual pleasure): The antidote is Chastity. Rather than just abstinence, it is defined as "having the body in the soul's keeping," treating sexuality with mindfulness and respect according to one's state in life.
